

INTRODUCTION

Waterproofing is a method used to protect buildings, surfaces, or objects from water damage. It involves applying special materials or coatings to prevent water from entering or causing harm. Waterproofing is commonly used on roofs, walls, basements, and bathrooms to keep them dry and safe. It helps in preventing leaks, mold growth, and structural damage caused by water. By using waterproofing, you can ensure that your home or any other structures stay strong and last longer, even in wet conditions.
